Portugal is a privileged country in the world of natural history. In under 100,000 km², it concentrates a wide variety of habitats, such as large estuaries, mountains, rivers, coastlines, the open sea, forests, islands, caves and vast plains. In these beautiful settings, visitors can watch the largest animals on the planet, the mighty whales, and admire countless birds, like the lofty gliders or the colourful passerines. Along the large rivers one can glimpse various amphibians, mammals, fish, reptiles or hundreds of insects.
